Utah tells this remarkable story:
Frank Ogden, a machinist, who recently wrote to the chiefs of police of several cities anking them to find him a wife, has received 221 letters within the hast two weeks, and they are still coming. He has received communications from single women and widows in every State in the Union. The gitls in the big department stores of the principal cities of the country are greatly in the majority among the fair sulfors. Ogden was so pleased with the sentiments expressed by the writer of one note that he answered it, incloging his photograph. It was from Chambersburg, Pa., and reads as follows:
"Dear Mr. Ogden: I have read your letter to the chief of police of Philadelphia, in which you say you want a wife and a home. I am 22 years old, and am an orphan. I, too, want a home and one cannot have a home without a husband. I will not say that I love you, because that would seem ridiculous, as I have never seen you, but I like your letter; its frankness appeals to me. If you are really in carnest in what you say, there is a little girl out in Pennsylvania, who works for her living, who will be giad to see you, if you think it worth your while to make the trip across the continent. When you writs to me tell me about yourself, not of your flannical standing, but of your aims in life, and what you desire to make out of life. I, too, have saved some money, but we will not talk of that, because if either of us dwelt upon riches it would seem as though we wished to bribe each other, knowing that of love there was not enough, I will not say that I apologize for having written to you, for if you are the right sort of man I will never be ashamed of having written you, nor will I regret it."

The spirit of the New York girl is shown in this letter:

"My Dear Sir: I saw your letter to have some beauty. I have all the qualifications to make some man a loving and industrious wife. I can do all kinds of housework, and have a fair education. I am a breadwinner. For three years I have some beauty, If that want, but if you seek wealth I cannot

A Chicago girl writes:

"My Dear Friend: I have read in the paper your letter, asking to be referred to some nice young lady. I am very sorry for you, that you have to send here for for you, that you have to send here for a wife. I am a young lady of 29, and have to board, as I have no home. I am a cashler in a department store. I have a good education. I am of a quiet disposition, and one who would appreciate a good home and husband, if I got one. I am not beautiful, but I possess something better—a face figure. I attend thing better—a fine figure, I attend church quite regular, and very seldom attend a dance. They say Chleago giris have large feet. That is not why I dislike dancing as I have the prettiest ankies imaginable. I prefer the theatre to a dance any time. I am tired of working twelve hours a day and want a home. I hope you will not think me too feward. I hope you will not think me too forward

From San Francisco comes this letter:

"Dear Sir: Pardon me for being so bold, but after considering that this is leap year, and hearing of you, I could not resist the temptation of writing to you. Your description appeals to me as being the one for whom I have been looking for some time. I see no reason why we should not agree, as I am medium complected, have blue eyes, but do not think I consider myself handsome, for I certainly do not. I am very sorry that CHARCED WITH PLOT TO think I consider myself handsome, for a certainly do not. I am very sorry that you had to go to the trouble of writing to Eastern cities for a bride, when I am certain that there are hundreds of girls in my town who are only awaiting their chance. I also regret that I have had to meet you in this way me I would much rather have been made acquainted with you, but considering the year, there is some excuse for me. I am not a working girl now, but when my father dies I will be thrown upon my own resources. To me the happiest woman is the one that me the happiest woman is the one that has a good husband and a home, as matter how humble it may be."

POPE PIUS HEARS THE NEW ORATORIO

(Special to The Times-Dispatch.)

ROME, April 16.—The Vatican this morning presented a spectacle unprecedented for centuries, when Pope Pius, the cardinals, other dignituries of the church, the members of the papal court, the "black" aristocracy, and three hundred other guests, assisted at the performance in the Sala Regia of the Abbo Perosi's new oratorlo, "The Last Judgment."

The choir, which included women singers, was personally directed by the composer. The Pope was greatly pleased with the presentation of Abbo Perosi's latest work, and offered him his congratulations on the success of the oratorio. It is popularly said that the present pontificate will be a golden era for sacred music. (Special to The Times-Dispatch.)

OLD FRIENDS MEET AFTER MANY YEARS

Reception to Miss Blackwell on Her Return From Europe.

(Special to The Times-Dispatch.)

ASHLAND, VA., April 16.—Professor John Mason, of New York, is a guest of Mr., James F. Howison, at the Henry Clay Inn. Professor Mason has recently resigned the chair of mathematics in the College of the City of New York, after a continuous service of twenty-five years, and has been spending the winter at Southern Pines, N. C. During his stopover in Richmond, Professor Mason called on his college mate, Major Robert Stiles, whom he knew at Yale before the war. They had not seen each other for forty years, but the recollections of their school and college days quickly revived the triendship of the past.

Professor Blackwell, of the college, returned to-day from Danville, Va., where he went to deliver an address before the Woman's Citeb, of that city. The base-ball team of Randolph-Macon College are now in North Carolina, where they will play Wake Forest, Trinity and the Agricultural and Mechanical Cellege.

"You may say that the produce men are thoroughly alive to the importance of the subject," said Mr. Walterstein yesterday, "This is sufficiently indicated by the resolutions. It is a splendid movement, and we hope to see it succeed. I am an active member of the Travelers' Protective Association, and the matter will be taken up by that organization. The Chamber of Commerce also should act."

In the office it was stated that the committee was at the present time awaiting some acton by the State Corporation Commission, which has the matter before it.

"I am informed," said one of the most prominent members of the committee yesterday, "that Richmond loses at least a million dollars a year on account of this ridiculous schedule. Every business man in town is heartly in sympathy of the movement for a change."

instant The Times-Dispatch had an interesting article on Vessels Named Virginia, and referred to six that had borne that honored name; the first referred to being a small vessel built during the period of the Revolution. The writer overlooked, in the lapse of centuries, the fact that the first ship built by Fingishmen in America, and built as long ago as the fall of 1607, was "a pretty pinnace of about thirty tons, which they called The Virginia,' the chief ship-wright being one Disby, of London." It will be remembered that it was the original purpose of the founders of our country to establish two colonies, one in the northern and the other in the southern and of Captain George Popham and Captain, Raleigh Gilbert, left Plymouth, England, on the last day of May, and con August 19th began the erection of coulte an imposing fort, which they called an imposing fort which they called an imposing for which and the provided an imposing for which they called an imposing for whic

It is notable that Maine, later and still so celebrated for shipbuilding, should have contributed as the single product of its first unfortunate colony this good little ship of thirty tons burden. The smallest of the three first ships, which came with Nowport to Virginia, in 1607, was the Discovery, a pinnace of twenty tons. The first ship of any size built in Virginia proper was a frigate built by Cuptain Samuel Angall at Old Point, in the spring of 1813. Her name has not been preserved.

When the great battleship Virginia graces our tricentennial with her presence, as doubtless she will do, there should be alongside of her for contrast a reproduction of the first "Virginia" also; the brave little pinnace of thirty tons, which was built on the Kenneleck in 1807; thence went to Fingland, and then came to do long and faithful service here, "Digby, of London," the builder of this first ship, should have his name preserved also. visions in the rivers.
